

Brief Introduction to the Universidad Veracruzana

Founded in 1944, the Universidad Veracruzana (UV) is a public university with an enrollment of approximately 60,000 students. The UV is comprised of five regional campuses with Xalapa serving as the main campus and the site of the exchange program with Georgia Southern University. Physical resources in Xalapa include a modern, state-of-the-art library with computer-assisted learning centers. Students interested in the arts will find an Arts Center, independent art workshops, a Music Initiation Center, a symphony orchestra, and a folkloric dance troupe in Xalapa.

Exchange students proficient in Spanish may take classes with native Mexican students in one of the 53 degree programs at the UV. Spanish language and culture classes are available at the UV's School for Foreign Students (EEE) and are offered at the beginning, intermediate, and advanced level. Some additional fees may apply for exchange students taking classes solely at the EEE. Georgia Southern enjoys a close relationship with the EEE Mobility Office and its on-site staff is responsible for the supervision of academic and resident programs for exchange students.

The city of Xalapa is the capital of the state of Veracruz. With a population of 400,000, Xalapa is an attractive place for Mexican and international visitors alike to enjoy splendid old architecture, open-air markets, outlying ruins of ancient civilizations, and the small-town atmosphere that still permeates the daily life of its citizens. The nearby snow-capped Pico de Orizaba, the narrow streets of the city, and the warmth of the people make Xalapa an enchanting place to visit. Natural beauty and culture meld with modern technology and educational opportunities to provide every student the experience of a lifetime.
