Do on the watch for whoopers.

Adapted from the Georgia DNR Newsletter (August 5, 2014). By: Elliot Ambrose

Whooping cranes are part of the endagered species. They are the tallest cranes. If you see them soaring overhead, you will want to watch for their distinct calls. They will call at day and night and are very vocal. They can be seen near the beach near St. Marks National Wildlife Refuge.

A new 8 X 4' display showing vivid pictures of the 40 non-poisonous snakes of Georgia.

If you're unable to visit the Center or pick up a brochure just remember to call us at (912) 478-0831 or email us at wildlife@georgiasouthern.edu for updates.

Gaps Off to Our WILD Graduates!

By: Casey Corbett

Students Rayne Wadley and Jordan Heath graduated from the Center for Wildlife Education. Rayne and Jordan graduated with a degree in Writing and Communication. Yavaria was one of the founders of the Arabic Club, a member of the Creative Writing Club, and a member of the Pre-Law Club. She will be attending the University of Wisconsin-Madison to study English and Islamic Studies.

If you have any questions regarding the care and/or handling of wildlife, or if you are interested in having the Center for Wildlife Education come to you, please contact us at (912) 478-0831 or email us at wildlife@georgiasouthern.edu.

Remember to keep your pets safe around venomous snakes. If you're in a wooded area, keep your dogs on a leash. Harass one, and more likely you will get bitten. The next time you see a snake just take a few steps back and walk away. Trust me; they are more afraid of you than you are of them.

Do you have any questions or comments? Email us at wildlife@georgiasouthern.edu.