Visa Information & Letters of Invitation for International Attendees

All international visitors should check and confirm current visa requirements to enter the United States with the nearest Consulate in your own country prior to departure. You should also check with your country’s embassy on any travel related restrictions or advisories that may be in place. The Southeast Coastal Conference on Languages & Literatures (SECCCLL) cannot be held responsible for travelers that do not confirm their visa requirements or obtain the appropriate paperwork to travel to SECCCLL.

When applying for a visa to enter the United States, it is highly recommended that participants apply early to allow enough time for the screening processes at their local U.S. Embassy. The U.S. Consular Services suggests travelers begin the visa application process at least 60 days prior to the date of travel, however, it is also recommended that travelers contact the Consular Services of their local Embassy to find out how long the wait is for an interview. Should a letter of invitation be required as part of a visa application, a written request must be submitted to SECCCLL via email: seccll@georgiasouthern.edu.

For security purposes, the Division of Continuing Education’s policy for issuing official letters of invitation for the SECCCLL is as follows:

- Letters of Invitation can only be issued to confirmed registrants, defined as those who have paid the registration fees for the full conference.
- After you have received your official registration confirmation, you should request a letter of invitation via email: seccll@georgiasouthern.edu.
- Letters of invitation can only be addressed and issued to the person registered for the conference. The Division of Continuing Education cannot issue letters of invitation for guests of participants.
- To expedite the preparation of a letter of invitation, please provide the following information in your request:
  - First Name

Note: Obtaining a Letter of Invitation from SECCLL will not guarantee that your U.S. visa application will be approved. The letter is merely supplementary information that explains a visa applicant’s intended purpose of travel to the United States. The decision to issue a visa is the sole judgment of the local Embassy or Consulate. U.S. Embassy officers look at the totality of an applicant’s personal and professional situation in determining visa eligibility. SECCLL is unable to assist with actual visa processing.

Should issues arise during the visa process and you are concerned that you may not receive your visa in time for the conference; you should contact the conference organizers immediately. If you are not able to attend the conference due to visa issues, we will issue a refund of your registration fee as long as the following two criteria are met:

1. A refund request must be received in writing by emailing seccll@georgiasouthern.edu, and
2. such notice is made on or before 14 days prior to the start of the conference.

If we are not informed of your visa issues before the above date, a refund will not be issued. Invitation letters will only be sent to those who have submitted payment for full conference registration.
